COMPETITIONS

The Musical America Guide to Top COMPETITIONS

Editor's Note

The 2025 Guide covers a vast range of competitions, with cash prizes from zero to big bucks, low to high visibility, and small to substantial application fees. But most do assure that a win will bring more than cash—performances, for example, or career guidance or a recording. A few also offer management: Concert Artists Guild promises “multi-year” management both in North America and Europe, along with a debut performance in New York and London, at Wigmore Hall. Young Concert Artists offers much the same.

Other events, while focusing on competition, lean over backwards to assure rewards, not just for the “best” participants, but for the “almost best” as well. The 40 semifinalists in the Queen Sonja Singing Competition who arrive in Oslo next April will not only compete for the €50,000 grand prize but will also have the opportunity to perform before industry movers and shakers—potential employers and presenters. Plus, they’ll be getting master classes, coachings, and attending career-development sessions.

Since the Azreili Foundation Prizes—awarded every two years in four categories—focus on the merits of a piece of music rather than its delivery, the biggest reward for winning, apart from CA$50,000, is the composer’s chance to actually see and hear his or her work actualized, not to mention exposed in front of a large audience. Last fall, four Azreili Prize-winning works performed by the Montreal Symphony Chorus under Director Andrew Megill were the centerpiece of the Foundation’s tenth-anniversary gala, held in Montreal’s Maison Symphonique.

Azreili, by the way, is “open to composers of all ages, genders, faiths, backgrounds, and levels of experience.” It is one of a handful, if that, which doesn’t prioritize “young” or “rising” artists.

The National Federation of Music Clubs, on the other hand, has something for every age, including 9 years old and under (!) for the Class I Junior Composers Award ($150 first prize) and no age limit for the NFMC Veteran Award ($2,250) to “former students who have served in the armed forces of our country and who wish to resume study in pursuit of a career in music.”

In other words, it’s never too late to pursue your passion.

Regards,

Susan Elliott
